Habsburg Austrian Empire; (, ) or Austrian Empire (strictly speaking, Habsburg-Lorraine) was the state ruled by the House of Habsburg in the first three quarters of the 17th century. The empire was created by Holy Roman Emperor Leopold I (1643–1705) to counter the spread of the Protestant Reformation in central Europe. It had control over the Bohemian crown lands, Transylvania, and Inner Austria. There were many other lands and peoples ruled by the Habsburgs (also called Habsburger), but no single Habsburg ruler had the title Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire until Joseph II (1741–1790) became emperor in 1780. The territory of the Habsburgs was partitioned in the course of the Thirty Years' War and was gradually ceded to the Austrian Empire. The last remnants were lost during the Napoleonic Wars. Etymology The Austrian Empire was named after the House of Habsburg, but the name is misleading: no member of the dynasty ever ruled the territory as a king. In fact, the Habsburgs originated as a cadet branch of the Luxembourg dynasty. It was the house of Habsburg that was named Austrian Empire, and not the other way around. History The crown of Bohemia, the oldest and most important part of the Habsburg Empire, was first established in 1083 by the Přemyslid duke Boleslav I the Brave (r. 1048–1077). His son, the first ruler of the dynasty, Svatopluk I (r. 1077–1095), was the first crowned king in 976. The territory was later divided in two with the creation of the Kingdom of Hungary in 1000, and the Bohemian Empire in 1196. In 1335 the Kingdom of Bohemia (including the areas of the former duchy of Bohemia) was separated from the Holy Roman Empire and made a separate state. The members of the Habsburg dynasty ruled a series of duchies and principalities over the Holy Roman Empire. The most important of these were Austria, Styria, Carinthia, Carniola, East Styria, Upper and Lower Styria, Galicia and Lodomeria, Galicia, the Inner Austrian regions of the Burgenland, and Carniola, as well as Inner 82157476af
